Wm Garrison — Sir — The martyrs to principle, and the poor, obscure, and suffering, are equally the objects of your sympathy In looking to the highest objects you do not overlook the lowest. Is it so Sir — that you are free in your own person from the trials and anxieties incidental to human nature, or is it that those are forgotten in your generous regard for the welfare of others. When I think of how much you have done for me, and how little claim I have upon you, the desire to do something to merit such kindness disturbs my quiet. It will be a welcome letter that announces that you have succeeded in finding an opening for me. My board is paid up to the last of this month. Mary I beg to be remembered to Mrs Garrison. God bless you Sir, my heart is too full for words.
